8.2 Relationship to Other Programs: Describe the curricular relationship between the program under review and closely related undergraduate or graduate programs.

The Concentration maintains close ties with particular disciplinary programs, especially, literature-language, philosophy, history, and, to a lesser extent, psychology. We also maintain strong ties with the Action-Cooperative Education program, with Social Services, and many of our faculty participate in University Without Walls, and community service programs. There is a particularly strong tie with Cross Cultural Communication, presently involving foreign language primarily. A graduate program in the humanities is being formulated Strong relationships are maintained with the Concentration in Communication-Action and, to a lesser extent, Modernization Processes.

8.3 Program Review: Describe any methods and procedures for internal and/or external review of the program, including any provisions for student participation in curriculum changes/review. (Also, see 10.4 below.)

The Concentration maintains a Curriculum Committee, as does each of the related disciplinary programs. These Committees report to the appropriate Executive Committee. As yet there have been no provisions for student participation in curriculum changes or reviews.

8.4 Career Preparation: Describe the career advisory services directly related and available to students in the program.

The Concentration has a student advisor who provides career information informally. Students in the program, of course, avail themselves, of the relevant University services.

8.5 Special Features: Describe any special strengths and/or unique features of the program not already noted.

Features of the program have already been noted. We are particularly proud of a strong, highly qualified, and diverse faculty.
